Episode overview: The National Association of Councils on Developmental Disabilities (NACDD) will partner with the COVID-19 Prevention Network to host a COVID Conversation Clinic for people living with disabilities. Despite how people behave, the COVID-19 pandemic has not ended, and the only way to limit the transmission of COVID-19 is to get vaccinated. We will learn from people with lived experience about how they have been handling the pandemic and why the vaccine was so important to them. In addition, we will work to explain some of the misunderstandings around the different vaccines and boosters and why mask-wearing is still essential.
